WHO:
Fahamu Pecou

WHAT:
Atlanta's long history of activism and artistry intersect through Fahamu's art, where he tackles the misrepresentation of black males in mass media by focusing on stories of hope and pride. But living in a city not immediately recognized as an art hub has had its challenges – he and his peers created a community themselves to draw more attention to Atlanta's arts scene.

"I never had any examples of how to become an artist, but I came to be that example for others."
